Adar, Gila. Occupational Prestige in the Kibbutz. 1, 45–54.

Anisef, Paul. University Graduates Revisited: Occupational Mobility Attainment and Accessibility. 2, 1–19

Ben Peretz, Miriam; Katz, Sarah; & Silberstein, Moshe. Curriculum Interpretation and Its Place in Teacher Education Programs. 4, 47–55.

Ben Peretz, Miriam, & Lavi, Zvi. Interaction Between the Kibbutz Community and the School. 1, 97–102.

Brown, Alan F. Interpersonal Administration. Overcoming the Pygmalion Effect. 4, 15–26.

Brown, Alan F., & Ritchie, T. J. Personal Constructs: Images of New Resolutions to Educational Problems. 4, 1–2.

Candy, Philip C. Personal Constructs and Personal Paradigms: Elaboration, Modification, and Transformation. 4, 56–69.

Cummins, Jim. Response to Weininger—Through the Looking Glass: What Really Happens in an Immersion Classroom. 2, 40–44.

Duhamel, Ronald J. Administration: Theory or Practice? 2, 54–62.

Duhamel, Ronald J. Response to Whitehead. 2, 66–67.

Eimer, Bruce N. See Mancuso, James C.

Gamson, Zelda F., & Palgi, Michael. The "Over-Educated" Kibbutz: Shifting Relations Between Social Reproduction and Individual Development. 1, 55–67.

Hazlitt, William. On the Ignorance of the Learned. 2, 68–73.

Lavi, Zvi. Toward an Alternative Evaluation Policy for Kibbutz Schools. 1, 92–96. See also Ben Peretz, Miriam.

Leviatan, Uri. Higher Education in the Israeli Kibbutz. 1, 68–82.

Leviatan, Uri, & Orchan, Elliette. Kibbutz Ex-Members and Their Adjustment to Life Outside the Kibbutz. 1, 16–28.

Magsino, Romulo F. Students, Parents, Educators: An Approach to Conflict of Rights. 3, 1–17.

Magsino, Romulo F. Response to McMurtry—Realism and Legal Policy. 3, 26–28.

Mancuso, James C., & Eimer, Bruce N. A Constructivist View of Reprimand in the Classroom. 4, 39–46.

McMurtry, John. Response to Magsino—Children, Parents, and Educators: From Control to Partnership. 3, 18–25.

Morgan, G. A. V. Yes! We Should Have Bilingual Immersion Programs: A Dialogue with Professor Weininger. 2, 44–49.

Morrison, T. R. The Soft Underbelly of Personal Construct Theorists: A Critique. 4, 76–81.

Near, Henry. Kibbutz Education: An Historical Approach. 1, 3–15.

Olson, John. Constructivism and Education: A Productive Alliance. 4, 70–75.

Orchan, Elliette. See Leviatan, Uri.

Palgi, Michael. See Gamson, Zelda F.

Pope, Maureen L. Personal Construction of Formal Knowledge. 4, 3–14.

Quarter, Jack. Kibbutz Education and Its Relevance to the West: Progressive Education Reconsidered. 1, 29–44.

Ritchie, T. J. In Praise of Idiosyncratic Study. 4, 31–38. See also Brown, Alan F.

Rix, Elizabeth Ann. Sift and Shift Effect: A Cognitive Process in Understanding the Psychological Dynamics of Administrators' Personal Decisions. 4, 27-30.

Russell, H.H. Response to Article by W. Gordon West (In Interchange 12, 2/3). 2, 74–76.

Sharp, Rachel. Response to Wexler. 3, 68–75.

Smyth, D. McCormack. The End of Universities in Canada. 3, 29–52.

Tal, Amos. Differential Predictors of Achievement Among Kibbutz and Urban High School Students. 1, 83–91.

Weininger, O. Learning a Second Language: The Immersion Experience and the Whole Child. 2, 20–40.

Weininger, O. Response to the Responses—Through a Glass Darkly: The Need for Dialogue on the Immersion Experience. 2, 49–53.

West, W. Gordon. Response to Russell. 2, 76.

Wexler, Philip. Ideology and Education: From Critique to Class Action. 3, 53–68.

Wexler, Philip. Response to Sharp. 3, 75–78.

Whitehead, LeRoy E. Response to Duhamel—Administration and Practice. 2, 62–66.